LONDON STREET WOMEN

AN AMERICAN EDITOR'S STRONG INDICTMENT

Mr. Edward Bok, the well-known American editor, who has been in London the Public Works Department, by Order of ment, made the following statement Government which allows such a traffic > the British people are making in behalf of our American soldiers, there is nothing; in contrast, that has surprised and depressed 'me so much as the apparently uncontrolled solicitation of our boys" by women on the London streets and in hotel lobbies, lounges, and restaurants. condition than is witnessed in the London my hands. Our boys are openly bolicited, not only by prostitutes, but by scores of amateur girls.

AMERICAN CITIES CLEANSED. difficult matter for the Government to control. Perhaps. But a fundamental matter of this sort cannot be dismissed on the ground of difficulty. We in the United States grappled with it as an instrument of war, and to-day we are or top of it. Such an act as a solicitation by a woman on a street in New York City would be an impossible occurrence. and this result was simply brought about by a conscientious Police Commissioner, with proper authority, who determined to rid the streets of these women and close as many houses of ill-fame as possible. Not only is this true of New York: City, but of Philadelphia, Boston, Chieago, St. Louis, San Francisco, and New Orleans as well, where the so-called " red | dectly plain language, you are surely light " districts in those cities have been wiped out and the women either arrested

The Federal authorities in the United States have shown that it is possible to minimise the social evil in large cities and around the military cumps and naval bases by throwing a five or 10 mile prohibitory zone around them. The British Government has, therefore, a precedent established a concrete example of this problem.

But all this is of small avail if we send our soldiers clean-blooded and strong-limbed over here only to begpoi- allowed to go on. .. somed and wrecked in the London streets. We should not be asked to send our boys here to be morally crucified. It is unfair to them; it is unfair to the great cause for which we are fighting; it is

I say it with care and thought that, if the American women knew what was going on here in the streets of London. there would be an outery that, in volume and quality, would be extremely unpleasant to the people of Great Britain. Furthermore, it might prove to be serious factor in an agitation to check flow of American troops.

STRONG ACTION NEEDED. Before anything of this sort happens,

I appeal to the British Government and to the people of Great Britain to take up this unpleasant subject actively and deal with it forcibly. What is needed is an aroused public sentiment insisting upon corous Government action.

I am aware that some effort has been mude through the women's pairol and other agencies, which have done excellent work. But that is simply touching the fringe of the question-is not getting at the heart of it. This is not a work to be left to private organisations; it is distinctly a matter for the Government. It ais the Government's responsibility.

I use the words "with its exection," for As against all the splendid efforts that what other conclusion can I reach? I am told by some whose positions carry authority that there is, in reality, a public acquiescence with this traffic based on the argument that the men who are making the great sacrifice must la permitted certain indulgences while away from home. I cannot believe this. I cannot believe that the moral standards I have been in a great many large cities, of the decent people of Great Britain and but I have never seen a more disgraceful of the United States differ so widely on such a fundamental question. If so, streets every evening. This condition is have read my British history wrongly. so evident and apparently so well-known And yet I confess I find myself in the that it needs no detailed description at deepest perplexity as to why this shameful condition of the London streets and the English comps is allowed to persist at a time when every one of our boys needs every ounce of vitality that it is possible for him to acquire, and when this is, of It will instantly be said that this is a all times, the very last to allow him to be shot through with disease.

THE UNFLEASANT TRUTH. I am sorry to have to say all this while am here as a guest of the British Government; it seems in a way discourteaus. But the object of my visit here is, as I understand it, to help to cement in every way possible the relations between Great Britain, and the United States, and this question has become essentially an international one. If after the owne is over, the two countries: are brought more closely together, as is the desire of all of us; we in America will naturally recur to the treatment given our boys while they were guests on British shore, coming to help to win the war. Is it going to help those relations to have us remember how the Government failed to protest those boys from the most pernicious diseases possible to them at this time; how, in perundoing here what we have done in the United States? For that is the unpleasant truth," and it is" this point that I ask the people of Great Britain to face and ponder over.

I waive the moral and sociological aspects of this question: I want to put it squarely on a bisis of fair play; as a matter of physical fitness; as a war mensure.

Under the Defence of the Realm Act your Government, as I understand it, can act, "If the power is not there, it should and can, be had forthwith. But as a Government successfully grappling with matter of simple fair play to the American boys and to the American women the evil should be starpped out at once. It must be. It is inconceivable that so grave a danger to our troops should be

ARRESTED BY THE BOLSHEVIKS " FOR ALLEGED CONSPIRACY."

Prince Kropotkin has been arrested i Petrograd for, it is alleged, taking part in the "English conspiracy" against the Bolshevik Government.

Prince Kropotkie, who is in his 76th year, became a revolutionary early in his career, and found refuge in England 1883 when exiled from the homeland. He returned to Russia after the Revolution, but has only once written to his friends in England. "There was so little cheerful to tell," he explained in spology.

There are over 150,000 isolated graves in France and Belgium notably on the Ypres and the Somme battle fields where they are thickly. strewn for several miles in length and breadth.

Any other course would be excesgively painful to relatives and unfair to landholders.

.Volunteers from among the comrades of the fallen will carry out the reburials under Chaplains. There are overwhelming reasons against the exhutation of bodies for removal to the soldiers' native countries which would be contrary to the principle of equality of treatment. Few could afford the expense and the task of emptying 40,000 graves swould be colossal.

GENTLE MANNERED PROPLE OF HARDY'S WESSEX.

"What an old-fashioned place it seems to be l'exclaimed Elizabeth Jane. is huddled all together, and it is shut in by a square wall of trees like a plot of garden ground with a box edging."
This is how Dorchester is described in

"The Mayor of Casterbridge" (Caster-bridge is Dorchester), and the town to-day is as it was them. No place in England has so retained the stamp of old time se this bright, rural town, built over ground once troil by the Roman legions and dweit on by exiles from the Imperial City.

The people of Dorchester step right out of Thomas Hardy's pages; writes are Angel Clare in the post office this morning, and I met Jude emerging from a second-hand bookshop. Tranter Dewy was wining his mouth on the steps of a taverp. Tess joyous companions of the milking-pail are now all wearing breeches. Mrs. Penny would call them brass-faced young huzzies.

To-day I saw Dorchester's real creator. Thomas Hardy bears the burden of old age gallantly. The small, well-set figure is erect, and his eyes are as cleur as youth. Every one in Dorchester knows him and loves him, but they respect his gentle alcoiness. It is only strangers who besiegs his beautiful house. Max All Wessex respects its quiet king. . AWARDS OF THE EDWARD MEDAL

ing George has awarded the Edward Medul to Thomas Jones in the following dreumstances :-

BRAYE COLL MINERS.

On the 19th November, 1917, a fall of roof occurred at the Cwm Cynon Colliery, Glamorganshire, as a result of which a boy was pinned down by a stone weighing liewt. It was obvious that another full was imminent; but notwithstanding the Jones at once stood over the box and with his back supported a stone which was about to fall on the boy and would have killed him. A further fall occurred, fortunately without injuring Jones. Jones supported the stone as lung as possible, but as he weakened it fel seriously injuring himself, but missing

Unfortunately the boy, after being extriented; died of his injuries, Jones, undoubtedly risked his life in attempting to save that of the boy, and his courage and, initiative, prevented the fall upon the boy of a stone-which would have instantly killed him.

Also to Hobert Farrington, Henry Foster, and Thomas Pickering for galhantry in endeavouring to save the life of a fireman who was overcome by gas at the Deep Pit. St. Helens Collieries :man, Peter Anders, was inspecting to place where a level was being driven to eut off a brow, and he went round the brow to test the progress of the work by knocking on the coal. Unfortunately, gas had accumulated "in the brow owingto the beattice cloth by which it was ventilated being broken down by a fall of coal. Anders was overcome by the gas, and his groanings brought several men to the place where he lay, which was in complete darkness, as it was dangerous to use any light. Thomas Pickering, a jigger, first tried to vescue the fireman, but, though he succeeded getting hold of Anders, he could not release the fireman's legs, which were instened round a prop, and he was overcome with gas, though he managed to roll clear. Henry Foster, a collier, then tried to rescue Anders, but was in Turn overcome by the gus and fell senseless. Pickering made a second attempt; systheont success. In the meantime, Robert Farrington, the under-manager, arrived and immediately...went into the gas but unconscious after two attempts. though he managed to grasp Foster's legs. Pickering then succeeded in graspping Farrington, who had kept his hold on Foster, with the result that both were rescued. Foster was brought round by Collieries, a fireman entered a place which was known to be dangerous owing to firedamp, and was overcome. Three men attempted, without taking any precautions, to rescue him, and were themselves rendered unconscious. Morris and Cummings, then crawled on hands and knees into the dangerous space, and succreded in rescuing three of the unconscious' men" in three separate journeys. They then entered a fourth time, followed by two others; but on reaching the body of the fourth victim they found that the two who had followed them were themselves partly overcome; and had to be removed. They then entered a fifth time, and recovered the body of the remaining man, who, however, was dead.
